

Book A

Chapter I

- We must first state what our inquiry is about and what its object is, saying that it is about demonstration and that its object is demonstrative science.
- Next, we must determine what a premise is, what a term is, and what a deduction is, and what sort of deduction is complete and what sort incomplete; and after these things,